

TERMS OF USE & PRIVACY POLICY

Access to, participation in, and use of this website constitutes the express consent and acceptance of the below Terms of Use and Privacy Policy and any future modifications thereto, as expressly stated. In case the visitor/user does not agree or understand these Terms of Use, in whole or in part, he/she must not visit and use the aforementioned and present website www.generationsymbiocene.gr.

TERMS OF USE

This site is a communication channel of the Generation Symbiocene project. The content of the site, such as information material of all forms and the names, images, logos and distinctive features that represent the initiative is the intellectual property of Generation Symbiocene. Any use outside the terms set forth in the relevant copyright law without prior consent is prohibited, as is the sale of the content of this website to third parties.

Generation Symbiocene is a sociocultural initiative exploring new ways to raise ecological awareness through art and community building, focusing on our species' emotional relationship with the natural world and the way humans deal with the ecological crisis.

The browsing, accessing or use of the Website and any services available through it constitutes evidence that the user has studied, understood and accepted all terms of use. In case the user does not agree with the terms of use of the site, he/she must not make use of its services and content.

In the event that users of the website are redirected to third-party websites through dedicated links, Generation Symbiocene is not responsible for the terms and conditions nor for the management on those websites.

Generation Symbiocene under any circumstances, including in the event of negligence, is not liable to the user or any third party for any damage, direct or indirect, positive or consequential, in any way related to the use of the site, its navigation & the use of the services or information contained therein.

This site may collect site user IDs using appropriate technologies, such as cookies or Internet Protocol (IP) address tracking. Cookies are small text files that are stored on each user's hard drive and do not receive any document or file from their computer. They are used to facilitate user access to particular services or pages of the site, for statistical purposes and to identify areas that are useful or popular. These elements may also include the type of browser the user is using, the type of computer, its operating system, online service providers, and other such information.

PRIVACY POLICY

Generation Symbiocene respects your privacy and is committed to protecting any personal information that may be required during your navigation on the website, according to acting European legislation, as integrated into Greek law (2472/1997). The use of any personal information is intended solely for the improvement of the services and information provided. Under no circumstances will Generation Symbiocene sell, transmit or disclose any personal information of its visitors/users to third parties.

If you visit this website, the following data are collected in order for Generation Symbiocene to be informed about the visit to the site and which are the minimum in order to comply with the Data Processing Authority that requires their minimal processing:

- Device data: device ID, operating systems, device version or other identifiers
- Connection details: time, date, visit's duration, user's place of origin, IP address.

The user is currently able to visit the entire website and its sub-pages, without revealing his/her identity and without providing any personal information. However, in the future there may be some areas of the site that require user registration to obtain a password and/or to collect personal data for specific purposes, as indicated in the present terms.

Generation Symbiocene may send newsletters to the user's email address unless the latter expressly objects. Generation Symbiocene will in the future be able to keep a record and process any user data (eg name, telephone number, email address) (hereinafter «personal data»), which will be accessed through the Website.

Generation Symbiocene will only collect users' personal data when they voluntarily provide it for the purpose of providing access to the above services available through the Website.

The deposition of the user's data when registering on the website will constitute his consent to the collection, use and transmission of his personal information under the terms of this Privacy Policy. The user will, however, be further specifically and explicitly required to give his consent to this effect by accepting the present before completing his registration process. In addition, the user will expressly consent to receiving information from Generation Symbiocene by any means of electronic communication, regarding the project's updates and programme, unless explicitly choosing not to receive any email.

The user will at any time retain the right to be informed, to access or object to the further processing of his/her Personal Data pursuant to Articles 11, 12 and 13 of Law 2472/97 for the protection of personal data. You can contact Generation Symbiocene at the following email address connect@generationsymbiocene.gr to exercise the rights of each user. Except as expressly required by the Law and /or the Competent Authorities, Generation Symbiocene will not otherwise disclose, transmit, disseminate or otherwise make available any information provided by the user without its consent.

In the event that users of the Generation Symbiocene website are accessed through third party websites via links (hyperlinks, banners), Generation Symbiocene is not responsible for the terms of use and protection of personal data they follow.